INFLATION PRESSURES ARE BUILDING. PROTECT YOURSELF.

The Federal government is pursuing seemingly unlimited spending and is enabling this with unsustainably low interest rates. Investors need strategies to preserve purchasing power and stay ahead of the stealth erosion of their savings.

Get Elected and Legally Trade on Inside information

November 14, 2011/0 Comments/in Global Issues /by Simon Lack 60 Minutes ran a piece last night revealing that Congressmen are not only exempt from the insider trading laws that apply to everyone else but also routinely exploit inside information to which they have access. That's right, members of Congress can and frequently do profit from inside information, and it's perfectly legal. Further description hardly [...]

November 14, 2011/0 Comments/in Global Issues /by Simon Lack
The challenges facing the Euro zone including most recently Italy seem so enormous and intractable that it's easy to contemplate previously unimaginable outcomes. Der Spiegel reports that the German government is preparing for a possible Greek exit from the Euro. The currency was designed without an exit – it's unclear how Greece could extricate itself. A weekend [...]

The FT on Not-So Hedged Funds

November 11, 2011/0 Comments/in The Hedge Fund Mirage /by Simon Lack

A friend brought my attention to a recent article in the FT by James MacKintosh in which he noted how hedge funds have increasingly been delivering returns that are correlated with the S&P500. It looks as if increasingly the search for alpha includes trying to time beta. The media isn't normally so negative on hedge [...]

Italy's in Play

November 10, 2011/0 Comments/in Bonds Are Not Forever, Global Issues /by Simon Lack

At least Italian savers are offered a decent return on their money. 7% on ten-year debt is a bit more like it – at least after taxes and inflation you stand a chance of being ahead of the game, unlike in the U.S. where government policy is hostile to savers and seeks to inflict real losses [...]

Another Day, Another Euro Crisis

November 9, 2011/0 Comments/in Bonds Are Not Forever /by Simon Lack

Of the many ways in which Silvio Berlusconi thought he could be forced from power, rising Italian bond yields was probably not high on his list. Even his titillating escapades seemed to have been insufficient to persuade the Italian electorate he should leave. But it turns out 7%+ bond yields, with €300Bn of new borrowing required in [...]
