Leaderless Britain Stumbles Towards Brexit

December 11, 2018/0 Comments/in Global Issues /by Simon Lack

Steel Tariffs Show Up in Surprising Places

December 5, 2018/0 Comments/in Global Issues /by Simon Lack

The G20 meeting on the weekend produced a mildly surprising rapprochement between the U.S. and China on trade. Most commentators regard the Administration's serial imposition of tariffs negatively. Stocks certainly liked the possibility of a lower temperature around this rhetoric. In spite of the U.S.'s many trade disputes, the economy shows little sign of suffering. [...]

MLPs Lose That Christmas Spirit

December 2, 2018/0 Comments/in MLPs /by Simon Lack

Around this time of the year we typically write about MLP seasonals. That's because the "January effect" has been an enduring pattern of investor activity, far more pronounced than in the broader equity market. Prices would reliably dip in November before firming in December and shooting higher in January. This was due to the combination [...]

Lower Volatility Stocks Gain Favor

November 28, 2018/0 Comments/in Global Issues /by Simon Lack

Low volatility is outperforming. In a rising market, taking more risk usually pays off. The recent reversal has investors seeking tangible value. Nothing exemplifies intangible value, or more accurately ephemeral value, better than Bitcoin. The great Risk On trade began the day of Trump's election victory, when an overnight market swoon quickly reversed. Bitcoin buyers [...]
